Arrest of a Fugitive Slave in Boston-Forger in Trouble, &c.

Bosros, April 3, 1851, At about 8 o'clock this evening, F. D. Byrnes, a deputy United States Marshal, arrested, with the assistance of three men, a fugitive slave, at a dance room, known as Thatcher Hall, in this city. The slave was taken to the Mansion House, on Hadover street, where a car-riage was procured and the slave conveyed at a rapid rate to the court house, and committed for the night in the lock up under the court house. The fact is not generally known this evening; hence very little excitment prevailed. The most intense feeling may be expected to-morrow. The owner of the slave is in town, and has recognised his property.

SECOND DISPATCH.

Boston, April 3-11 P. M. The negro belongs to Savanuah, Georgia, and is named Alfred Symmes. The warrant for his arrest was granted at 1 P. M., to-day, by George T. Curtis, Esq., one of the United States Commissioners, on application of C. J. Thomas, attorney for the claimant. The arrest was first effected by policeman Asa O. Butman, assisted by policeman Alfred Sleeper, in Richmond street. Mr. Butman was badly stabbed with a knife in the groin, by the fugitive, who yelled loudly for help. A negro was found in his company, who was handsomely handled by Mr. Slee-Butman's wound is to the depth of three inches, which was dressed by Dr. J. C. Warren. It is not thought dangerous.

After the arrest, the negro was placed in a carriage in charge of Mr. Byrnes, at the Manson House, and com-mitted. There were several citizens at the court house door to assist in getting the man in, but there was no crowd. The negro resisted again at the door, but was ALBANY, April 3, 1851. The question pending was on the passage of the bill to provide for the Eric canal enlargement, and the Genesee

Mr. Monars said the Legislature of JSM would long be remembered for its action. In its artitrary course in forcing an election of the United States Senator, and other things. The bill now before the House is one of great importance. More is to be accomplished by it than may at first be supposed; but as to the means by which it is to be accomplished there is a great variety of opinion on constitutional grounds. As to the enlargement of the canals, he did not believe there was any division of opinion; but as to the means by which it was to be effected, he thought there was, and jurily. The bill, he insisted, 'sought to avert an explicit provision of the constitution, which prohibited the incurring of a debt for the purpose proposed Mr M, then discussed the constitution, which prohibited the incurring of a debt for the purpose proposed Mr M, then discussed the constitution, if it was for creating a debt, then it was not legal; and if it provided for the expenditure of so large a sun of the public famile, it was equally as illegal. Mr. M, then read from the constitution, and cited certain cases to sustain him in this position. He disclaimed any intention of attributing partisan motives or feelings to the advocates of this measure, ner would be sanction the expension of any member of the party to which he belonged, because he happened to agree with his positived appoints on this important question. The necessity for this work was undoubted. In fact the people of this state, as a community, were favorable to this enlargement; but the name or it which it was to be accomplished was a subject upon which there was a wide difference of opinion. The gentleman from Lewis, [Mr. Lyon.] in his advocacy of this measure, claimed for this great work the support of the members of the House; if they reverseed the mighty dead, who were now dust and ashes, he recalled to their rained the master spirits whom he styled the friends of the exanal. De Witt Chaton, slias Wright, and others, and he certainty was fearful that the innamine training of those great men would be re-vivined by the soul of some human spirit, which might rebuke him (Mr. Lyon) for his advocacy of a vicinition of the constitution, Mr. M. paid a high compliment to John C. Spenser, as a juriet and a schedar, but be left to those who s may at first be supposed; but as to the means by which it is to be accomplished there is a great variety of

It had been stated that these surplus revenues were the properly of the State. Could the State appropriate the funds to any other purpose than the completion of the called the the my might be expended in each fiscal year, for the fiscal year fidd not end till June, and the Legislature adjourns in April. If this objection was insisted upon, the section of the constitution authorizing an appropriation for two years rendered it invalid and inoperative. The speaker insisted that the constitutionality of the bill could be shown in every point, and that every objection urged against it could be refuted by conclusive and irrefragable evidence; and as it had been one of the great points of those opposing the bill to allude to the dependence placed on the opinion of John C. Spencer, he would say, that if gentlemen would devote themselves to answering the opinions of Mr. Spencer, instead of making chargos, they would find better employment, and might then urge objections against the bill with reason. The offered objection was, that the State had no right to contract a debt without the consent of the people. This was to be no debt for which the State would be responsible, but the fund created by the surplus revenue sarising from the canals, and the assignment of the money, and that is the only remedy in the assignment, the fund being wholly responsible. If this surplus revenue is not sufficient to pay the certificates which shall be issued, the State assumes no liability. It cannot be held responsible for any deficiency. A fourth objection is, that you cannot raise money on the credit of a fund belonging to the State, without creating a debt, and making the State responsible for the loan. (The Speaker here read from the constitution and responsible for the loan. (The Speaker here read from the constitution and sepecified in the constitution. The gentleman from Herkimer (Mr. Wooster) argued that he genue the State agreed to keep the tols at a certain rate, this bill was in violation of the constitution. The gentleman from Herkimer (Mr. Wooster) argued that he genule man of the paying the should prove the shall prove the holds and unvalidate the demand; and, even allowing that they should fail, t Flagg rever failed to let the people know that he was distinctly in favor of a direct tax instead of appropriating the revenues towards the completion of the enlargement. It has been stated that these certificates should not be made a basis for banking. He believed it was actually necessary that something be done towards making a basis for moneyed circulation, as in a short time the State would be free from debt, and of course there would be no outstanding State stocks for banking purposes, and it was therefore indispensable that there should be some basis established. These certificates, then, will form an excellent basis, providing they are good, and on this point there could be but little doubt. The adversaries of the bill believed the enlargement of the canal would increase the revenues, and of course, at the time for the redemption of the certificates, they would be net with principle and integret. Greatly increased on account of the reduction of rates, and the same charges for tolk will doubt the revenues, and the same charges for tolk will doubt the revenues as to that the growth of our country, both in population that the growth of our country, both in population as to draw into the disaster; and if this samal is so enlarged and proof. It she business of the west, which shows as to draw into the charges for tolk will doubt the revenue the greatest incr. Conceding that the calargement will not increase the rev. The still these certificates will be good, and will be redeeme. So the revenue of the revenue from the increase of the revenue in gentleman will assert that after the increase of the revenue in gentleman will assert that after the increase of the revenue in the treasury, of nearly two millions of dollars. The Speaker then alluded to the political turn which gentlemen had attempted to give to this matter, and from their arguments, nothing could be plainer than that the democratic party were opposed to the enlargement of the Eric Canal. The Speaker then stated that, if he had arguments, nothing could be plainer than that the democratic party were opposed to the cubargement of the Eric Canal. The Speaker then stated that, if he had time, he should be pleased to show that at least one part of the democratic party were favorable to this project, and that the attempts of the opponents of the bill to give to it a political character, were certainly not well made. If however, it was desired to render it a principle of party, he was ready, with the party to which he had the honer to belong, to meet it as such; and he should ever be found in favor of this great work of internal improvement.

he found in favor of this great work of internal improvement.

Mr. A. A. Theorems took the floor in opposition to the bill, and discussed the constitutionality of the law which it was proposed to force through the House at all hazards. He asserted that the democratic party were not the opponents of the enlargement of the Eric Canal, as he could point to the message of William L. Marcy, in which it was recommended that the enlargement should be undertaken; but if has been the policy of that party not to enlarge till the interests of the people of the State should demand it, and they should recommend it, without sacrificing the interests of the State. Allusion was then made to the course pursued by the gentleman from Orleans, (Mr. Burroughe.) and he disclaimed any intention of of following the line of the gentleman from Herkimer, in reading him (Mr. B.) out of the democratic party. Still he should not be backward in telling that gentleman, that he believed him to be supporting a recognized whig measure. He complimented Mr. B. for his defence of democratic principles, and regretted that he was compelled to differ from him on this important question. He then read from the Albany Argus, to sustain him in the assertion that the democratic party had slawys been the friends of the enlargement of the canals but that they were opposed to the creation of State debts for such a purpose, and commented at length upon this point. Mr. Thompson continued his remarks in classing this as a whig mounter, and his argument was many in exposition of the views of the democracy, and what he termed the foliacy of the whig party. views of the democracy, and what he termed the foliacy of the whig party. Before concluding the hour for recess arrived, and the House took a recess.

AFFERNOON SESSION.

Mr. Theoresse concluded his remarks. He was followed by Mr. Asrasa, who advoted the passage of the bill as introduced by Mr. Alen, and in opposition to the substitute of Mr. Lerry. He was opposed to the theory of direct faxation, as cherished by the democratic party of the Stale, and was in favor of the proposition to complete the colorpoment by an appropriation of the surplus revenues of the canasis for three years, to the amount of $0.00,000. This method would not impose upon any portion of the State a greater burthen than was to be borne by their neighbors. The system of internal improvements was the offspring of the whig party, and in direct opposition to it stood the democratic party. That question has been perfected, and the advantages derived from it are now conceded on all hands. Mr. A. at this stage of his remarks, paid a high compliment to De Witt Ginten. The father of the canal system, and alluded to the opposition arrayed against him, in consequence o his advocacy of the internal improvement system, and the construction of lateral canais, and his elevation to the chief magistracy if the State, in twinstanting the most uncertipulous exertions of the canadic of the project. He argued that the system of direct taxation had two been one of the cardinal principles of the democratic party, as particularly exemplified in the message of Siles Wight and Azariah C. Flag. He insisted that to the whig party, and it alone, belonged the credit of eighnaling the canadic of the cardinal principles of the democratic party, as particularly exemplified in the message of Siles Wight and Azariah C. Flag. He insisted that to the whigh party, and it alone, belonged the credit of originating the canadic of the State, which have proven originating the canadic of the State which have proven originating the canadic of the original party and called for by a s been traversed by those who had proceeded him; but he did intend to state, in as brief a manner as possible, the conclusions which should actuate him in the vote he was to cast on the final passage of this bill. When he first came to consider the subject, three questions presented themselves, namely :—1. Is this a work demanded by the increasing business of the canals? 2. Are there means by which to per without resorting to taxation? and 3. Can these means be employed for this purpose, and in the manner proposed, without an infringement of the provisions of the constitution? And first, as to the demand for the enlargement, Mr. Allen cited the reports of the canals was wholly inadequate to the rapidly increasing business transacted on this arcune of transportation. Secondly, as to the means with which to perform this work—The surplus revenues of transportation. Secondly, as to the means with which to perform this work—The surplus revenues of the canals, as appears by the report of the committee, will, in the course of fifteen years, accumulate a fand sufficient to redeem the certificates proposed to be issued, by the interest of six per cent, and leave a balance is taken as a criterion, the sum olders, and if the past be taken as a criterion, the sum olders, and if the past be taken as a criterion, the sum olders, and if the past be taken as a criterion, the sum olders, and if the past be taken as a criterion, the sum olders, and if the past be taken as a criterion, the sum olders, and if the past be taken as a criterion, the sum olders, and if the past be taken as a criterion, the sum olders, and if the past be taken as a criterion, the sum olders, and if the past be taken as a criterion, the sum olders, and if the past be taken as a criterion, the sum olders, and if the past be taken as a criterion, the sum olders, and in the canadicate of the critical sum of the critical
